Chapter 1 by Jasper Lepani

Her sleek, smooth sides sit pretty in the cold, dark, void of space. A massive beauty moored in the shadow of an ancient Goliath, with only the thousands upon thousands of artificial lights from the S.S.S. (Saturn Space Station) to illuminate her flanks.

The U.E.N. (United Earth Nations) Quantum was a long range research ship, the first of her kind. It's mission to push the limit of human exploration and purposely travel through a local space anomaly in the solar system, a worm hole bending the very dimensions we know.

On the other side of this worm hole was another universe, so unimaginably far away that we can not even grasp what it may be like and in that universe is the U.E.N. Ragnarök.

A prototype military vessel built to defend our solar system from what ever created the worm hole in the first place.

Chapter 2 by Adam

Life aboard the Ragnarök is difficult, life in another universe is harder. Nothing humanity has ever known lies here, nothing they would ever know. The constant threat of the unknown keeps us all on our toes, an utmost state of alertness lingers in the vessel. No parties, no celebrations, nobody ever off guard. Ever

"Unknown blip to the south-south-east of our solar system. No confirmation of alliance, or enemy allegiance. Took a long time to get here. Warned us all on bridge. With the few clicks of a control panel, they were hailed. This is the U.E.N. Ragnarök, state your name and purpose." With another click, it was sent.
